

Pam's Beach Dream

Pam and Ben went to the beach.
Pam sat on a mat.

She had a neat snack and a book to read. The sun's heat beat down.

A hot beam fell on her seat. "This heat is too much," Pam said.

"I can not eat my snack or read my book."

She had a big dream of a cold spot by the sea. Ben had a plan.

He held up a big green cloth.
Pam helped him pull it out. "We can make a tent!"

Ben said. They did. The cloth gave them shade from the heat.
Pam sat back down.

"This is a fine seat now," she said. She could eat each pea and all her meat.
