Kate made a huge pan of fudge. She cut it up and put the best chunks in a red box. "I hope I win the prize," she said.

Her pal Gus had a red box too. His box was full of gems and stones he had dug up. Gus set his box down by Kate's and ran off to chase a bug.

Kate grabbed a red box and put it on the stage. Ron was the judge. He had a big badge on his chest. He opened the lid, picked up a lump, and took a giant bite. Crack! "This fudge is strange," Ron said.

Kate looked in the box. "Oh no! That is a gem, not fudge!" she said. Her face turned red.

Just then, Gus dashed up to the stage with the right box. "I think this is your fudge, Kate," he said. "I had one bite. It is like magic!"

Judge Ron took a small bite. Then he took a big one. "What a change!" he said with a grin. He made a note on his pad. "Kate wins the prize!"
